

FRANCESC RIFÉ

HO CUBE

open-and-shut case

The verdict is in. Francesc Rifé Studio's pop-up desk for José Martínez Medina may be named HO Cube, the acronym standing for home office, but—given the adaptability that today's corporate workplace demands—the concept is equally fitting for both. The unit is fully wired and fitted with file folders on the inside. On the outside, surfaces combine lacquer and wood veneer, illuminated by an LED lamp. When closed, the footprint is just 28 by 39 inches. Pair HO Cube with Tap, a wool-upholstered stool with a leather handle. The pair are debuting at the Interiors From Spain booth. jmm.es >

TAP

MARKET neocon

"Open, the piece speaks of practicality—closed, there's pure geometry"